#LifeDataMatters: Data with a SOUL

MARCUS STROTHER, COORDINATOR OF YOUTH DEVELOPMENT, SACRAMENTO CITY UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT, SACRAMENTO, CA

Burwood 1&2

As a field, we are responsible for a great amount of data, data that shows why our programs are needed and why they matter. Yet, the students we serve are so much more than data. Often the most impactful and life changing experiences are more difficult to measure. The challenges, traumas, victories, and teachable moments are often not found in the numbers. Discover how a #LifeDataMatters focus can change how we go about our work.

Educators and expanded learning burnout is real. You are on the front lines with our students and yet most of us have gotten a bit foggy on what got us started. This workshop seeks to help participants know thyself better in order to better serve their students. Through interactive fun activities, we will remind you why you matter just as much as the students you serve. It is easy to get off track this session is designed to help you not continue to give from an empty cup.

Self-Care: For YOU and the YOUTH

Greenwood 5

MARCUS STROTHER, COORDINATOR OF YOUTH DEVELOPMENT, SACRAMENTO CITY UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT, SACRAMENTO, CA

As adults, we forget the importance of self-care. We forget that the best you is a rested you. During this workshop, we will work on forgiveness journals, self-care practices, and ideology around culture building. The building of a successful culture in the classroom, a school, and a community is the first investment in creating successful students. The educational system often invests most of its time on creating programs for youth. I want to provide methods of change that will allow for programming for our adults to be strong, healthy, and purposeful adults that work with our students.

#iAmImpact Healing Circles

Greenwood 4

NATHAN HOUSTON, FOUNDER, #IAMIMPACT, SACRAMENTO, CA

What would happen if we were intentional with our dialogue? What if we really took the time to understand people and help address their needs? The circle process is often overlooked and underutilized within workspaces. Sometimes we just need an old-fashioned sit down with intentional dialogue. This workshop is intended to create intentional dialogue and conversation amongst students by using the circle process. During this workshop, educators will explore what it takes in order to create the positive and healthy space for youth. Come explore the endless possibilities circling. Restorative Justice is not a particular program or blueprint. Restorative Justice is an invitation to dialogue and an exploration of what a community needs to ensure all members strengthen and maintain healthy relationships. This process also helps promote social and emotional learning.
